

Johnston wins $20,000 jury verdict from city

Arguments are scheduled Friday before Circuit Judge Leslie B. Grant on a defense motion for a new trial after a jury late last Wednesday awarded a $20,000 judgment to Hazy Johnston in his $180,000 suit against the city of Bay St. Louis.

Johnston filed the suit for damages he claimed resulted from an accident between a car he was driving and a city dump truck on Central Avenue and the city dump in February, 1953. The trial occupied two days.

Another jury found for the defense in a suit brought by Loretta T. Lutz, who Loretta Lutz Electric Services, Inc., Maurice Colly individually and the North Bay Apartments.

Bill Curran Chevrolet won a $1,168.00 jury verdict in a suit against Richard Burgo and carried a recommendation for a six-month stay of execution which was ordered by Judge Grant.

Twelve more jurors were called to the jury box at the start of the day's proceedings, including a whole raft of default judgments. They were ordered as follows:

Standard Materials, Inc., vs. Carter-Murphy Construction Co. of Al. Kilmoroch Investment Co. dismissed and judgment of $2,773.92 with interest.

Guilty says jury on highway fatal

A Hancock County jury deliberated 17 minutes to arrive at the unanimous verdict of guilty as charged in the case of Leroy Christmas, 28-year-old Pearlinton negro, on trial in the automobile death of one of seven killed in a four-car crash on Nov. 1.

Culpable negligence resulting in manslaughter of Harold W. Nienaber, 43, driver of the car in which his wife and a daughter, 14, were also killed and two other daughters critically injured, was the charge leveled against Christmas by District Attorney Boyce Holloman and assistant Albert Neill before Judge Leslie B. Grant Tuesday.

William Frisbie, court appointed counsel for Christmas, and the state agreed on jurors in a relatively brief time and first witness, David Brooks of the Highway Patrol took the stand at 11 a.m.

He first explained a diagram of U.S. 90 at Bayou Coward bridge near Pearlinton, where the accident occurred, showing positions of four vehicles just after the crash. Two, side-swiped on drivers' sides, were headed west, as was the Christmas vehicle when it allegedly struck the Nienabers' almost head-on, in the eastbound lane of traffic.

Also fatally injured were four passengers in the 1940 model car owned by Christmas. They were Wilbert C. Williams, 14, and Ralph Williams, 15, of Bay St. Louis; Archie Thomas of Waveland and Richard Burton of Pearlinton.

Pictures of the wreckage and Nienaber's body were offered as exhibits for the state.

E. E. Shows, operator of Shantli La Fishing Camp, testified as an eyewitness to the speed of the Ford, and two boys, Ronald Wipert, 14, and Charles Wallace, 12, who were walking on the bridge, said they saw the Christmas car approaching moments before the wreck. Witnesses agreed that the Nienaber car was hurled into the air upon impact, the Christmas car striking it, flipping over and landing on all four wheels.

Ray Anderson of Pearlinton, driving just behind the Nienabers, estimated their speed at less than 50 miles an hour. He said he recognized Leroy Christmas lying on the highway on the driver's side of his car. Shows and Anderson, upon recall to the stand, testified on Christmas' reputation for driving, as did Patrolman Brooks, Douglas Williams, Bay St. Louis policeman, also said he saw Christmas at the wheel of the Ford, on Sycamore Street the afternoon of the accident.

Frisbie had as witnesses Mrs. Edna Christmas, mother of the defendant; a sister, Clara Christmas; his first cousin Dorothy Finlaison and an uncle by marriage, John David.

Sentencing was deferred until Friday upon Frisbie's request.

Christmas pleaded innocent to the seven manslaughter indictments returned against him by the grand jury last week. No dates have yet been set for hearing the other charges.

Robert O. D. Bennett, indicted on an embezzlement charge, pleaded innocent before.

Miss Cazeneuve Recalling banking and Bay of 58 1/2 years ago

How many people know that State Street was known as Apollonary Lane and that a big hotel - The Crescent, then the Pictorial, stood where Court Street now goes from the Beach to Second Street?

Not too many any more. But one who does is Miss Ruth Cazeneuve of Main Street who retired from the Hancock Bank at the end of last year after 58 and a half years of service.

Miss Cazeneuve entered the bank in 1896 right after she was graduated from St. Joseph Academy - the only student to be graduated that year - the first from the new convent. The old convent burned down in 1907 and for the balance of time the students and nuns were housed in three old houses on the beach, located right where the present US 90 crosses the city.

A letter for about 50 years, Miss Cazeneuve was elected assistant cashier in 1938, assistant vice president in 1951 and vice president in 1956. She is a member of Our Lady of the Gulf Catholic Church, the Altar Society, the National Assn. of Bank Women and the American Institute of Banking.

Her father, the late Joseph F. Cazeneuve, had served as vice president and cashier of the bank. Mr. Cazeneuve was one of the founders of the financial institution along with Peter E. Hollweg, a cotton merchant out of New Orleans, the bank's first president.

Miss Cazeneuve entered the bank during the regime of the second president, Eugene H. Roberts, and served during the tenure of H.S. Weston, Leo W. Seal and Leo Seal, Jr., Hancock's present president.

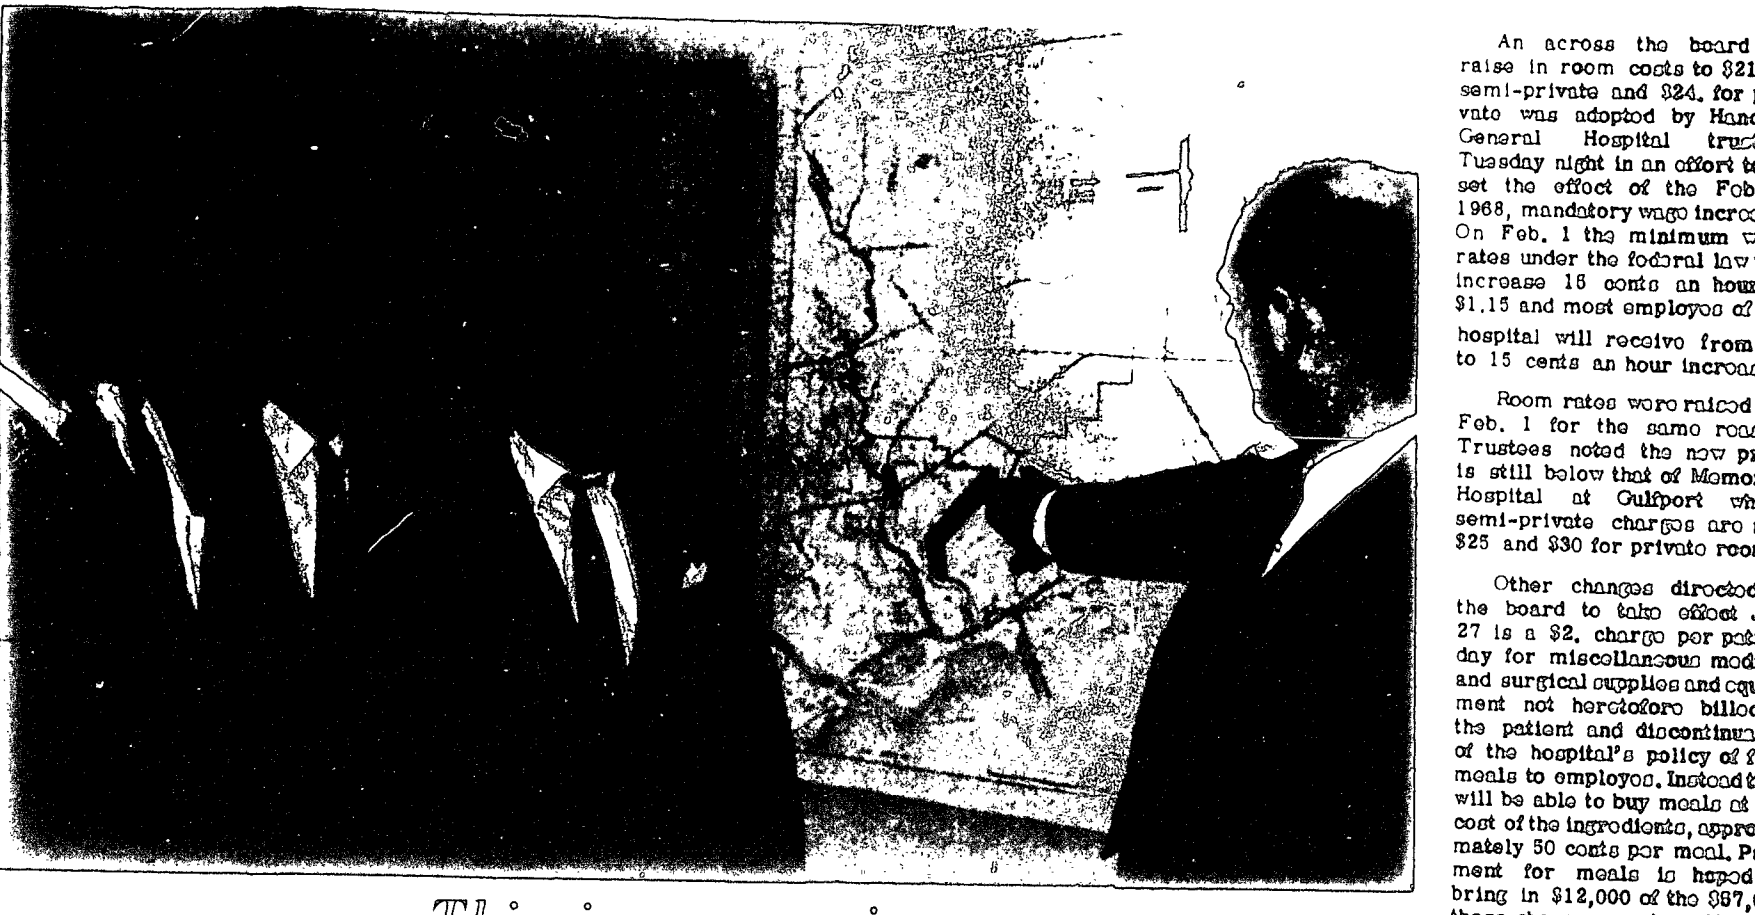

Although the bookkeeping machines were a great step forward the greatest advancement in banking was the advent of the computer, Miss Cazeneuve said this week. Prior to this time letters of credit and checks would come in daily but many of them were covered with bank stamps it was almost impossible to tell the point of origin.

"We had to study came checks with a magnifying glass

Federal wage law hikes hospital room rates $3

This is our project

Port commission elects FAA ups allocation for Hancock airport

Donald Landry of Waveland was re-elected president of the Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission Thursday at its first meeting since the appointment of four new members.

Also named to serve at the rate of $75 per month a piece were attorneys, Michael Heas and Gerald Cox.

The port men recommended to the board of supervisors acceptance of the low bid of Yates and Patterson, Inc. of Jackson on airport construction subject to approval of the Federal Aviation Agency.

The move came after Landry read a telegram from Walter Bateson, administrative assistant to Congressman William M. Colmer, advising them of a revision in the airport construction allocation.

The Hancock airport is now allocated $476,850, up $85,350 from the previous construction grant. That is enough to provide 10 per cent contingency.

This sum, plus matching funds from the county, is now sufficient to cover initial airport costs.

Yates and Patterson's bid is $746,513.27 on base and alternate No. 1, embankments built from on-site excavation. A reduction in paving thickness, by change order at time of the award, will reduce the amount by $27,807, bringing the total required for land acquisition, engineering costs, etc., to $993,800.

Although reduction in paving thickness will require more work to later convert the runway to 6,500 feet, it is adequate to handle the Martin 404 aircraft expected to be utilized by commercial carrier services at the onset.

FAA approval is expected upon its receipt of the proposed bid award as all plans and specifications have been to its requirement and complete initial financing is now available.

Cazeneuve reported that so far the commission had realized about $2,000 from the sale of pulp wood from the airport.

Port chief sought by commission

The need for an experienced port director to attract industry and supervise port and airport construction within the county was unanimously decided upon Monday by the Port and Harbor Commission.

Meeting in special session to review all applications for the post received so far commissioners decided to advertise the position as being vacant with a cut off date of Feb. 1.

Resumes are being collected from potential candidates and they should be forwarded to Donald Landry, commission president.

The Bayco of the Year will be chosen by the Jaycees from nominees from information submitted by their members. The winner will be honored with a plaque and publicly recognized.

Last year's Bayco of the Year was Robert Hamilton of Hancock Bank.

Previous Bayco winners are 1960, E.J. Maronage; 1961, Thomas Logan, who later was made state's outstanding young man; 1962, D.W. North; 1963, Rev. Emory Garcia, then pastor, First Baptist Church; 1964, Angelo Arceneaux; 1965, Michael Hays; 1966, Bert Stokell.

Tickets are now on sale for the function and application should be made to Charles Carter, over-all chairman, at 497-5551.

United Fund to elect 8 Tuesday

Eight new directors will be elected to the board of the Hancock County United Fund at the annual general membership meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the parish hall of Christ Episcopal Church on Carroll Avenue.

Sixteen names, twice the number to be chosen, will be presented by the nominating committee consisting of James R. Ginn, chairman, Mrs. C.R. Beyer, Thomas E. Flynn and O.J. Howe.

In addition to the six board members whose terms expire at this time, there are two resignations. Charles A. Russo, III, president for the last year, and Miss Patricia Thompson have resigned. Others going off the board are Mrs. Beyer, W. Ray Gordon, Ed Arceneaux, James

How the U.S. can limit costs

Sensing the news

By Thurman Sensing, Southern States Industrial Council

As the outlook for the Vietnam war in 1968 is continued heavy fighting, costing huge sums to the American taxpayer, it is essential that the United States find new ways of limiting defense expenditures in regions other than the Far East. One way to do this is to make better use of existing allies and to develop new ties with other anti-communist states.

In this connection, Americans have to consider the defense problems arising in the Indian Ocean as a result of growing Soviet sea power. The Soviet Union, long considered a land power exclusively, today is turning to the seas. It has a big naval task force in the Mediterranean and has even greater naval ambitions in the Persian Gulf and Indian Ocean areas. Behind the Soviet moves to the seas is a desire to manipulate world commerce, to capture control of the oil resources of the Middle East and to dominate Africa.

The United States cannot afford to ignore Soviet Communism's power drives in these areas. Yet the question arises: where will the U.S. find the financial resources to take on new military commitments in the Indian Ocean and adjacent areas of Africa threatened by communist pressures?

The answer to this question may lie in making better use of diplomacy and in accepting friendship that has been offered and rejected in the past. A case in point is the willingness of the Republic of South Africa, a powerful anti-communist nation, to assume burdens of defense in the Indian Ocean area.

With a strong economy and a currency based on gold, South Africa is in a position to devote extensive resources to the curbing of communism in and around Africa. With the naval traditions of the British and Dutch -- two great seafaring peoples behind them, the South Africans have the know-how to develop a sizeable fleet to deter communist ambitions in the Indian Ocean.

Yet the United States has not taken advantage of the offer of South African friendship. Failure to take advantage of it already has cost the American people a lot of money. Ironically, though South Africa is staunchly anti-communist, the U.S. government refuses to sell military equipment to the Republic. This refusal is all the more absurd in view of the Johnson administration's insistence that the U.S. should trade with the communist countries or of Eastern Europe and "build bridges" to those violently anti-American nations.

Britain's socialist government, which has brought England to the door of economic ruin, likewise persists in refusing to sell warships and jets to South Africa although Englishmen need the jobs the defense contracts would produce. Happily, even some Labor ministers now recognize the wisdom of removing arms sales. It is to be hoped that the U.S. government will move in that direction in 1968.

Failure to use South Africa as an anti-communist bulwark may drive that country into a neutralist stance, a posture the U.S. can politically ill afford.

Gen. De Gaulle is eager to woo the South Africans and to sell them arms.

The whole fanatical crusade against South Africa, because it won't bow to the winds of barbarism and communism blowing over the African continent, has a high dollar and cents cost to the American people. For years, the U.S. has shouldered an increasingly large share of the burden of Western defense against communism. U.S. expenditures have to be reduced to protect the dollar. One of the ways to reduce those expenditures overseas is to find other countries that have the courage and the financial means to work as real allies in the global struggle for victory in the cold war.

Nor should Americans forget little Rhodesia, the courageous country in South-Central Africa that had the intestinal fortitude to stand up to Britain's socialist regime and to the Afro-Asian dominated United Nations organization. Rhodesia is another stabilizing force on a continent that lives with the threat of chaos and communist subversion. The Rhodesians, unlike the British and other so-called allies, have offered to send a contingent of troops to fight against the communists in Vietnam, even though Rhodesia faces communists on its own northern border.

If the friendships of these true Western states in Africa are accepted, and if America's military know-how is shared with them, it will not be necessary for the United States to spend vast new sums to create military bulwarks against the expansionist Russians in the Indian Ocean and Africa. These anti-communist states in Africa are natural bulwarks to Red aggression.

Jackson report

By Rep. Walter J. Phillips

This will be the first in a series of articles which will attempt to keep the people of Pearl River and Hancock Counties up to date on legislative happenings, particularly those matters of interest to this area.

The first two weeks of the 1968 session have mainly consisted of organizational matters, and those of more or less uncontroversial nature involving preparations for the advent of the new administration. The anticipated battle over the election of a Speaker failed to develop due to the withdrawal of one of the two candidates. It might be pointed out that both of the Representatives from the 50th District had pledged to support John Junkin of Adams County, who was elected Speaker without opposition.

One of the main responsibilities of the Speaker of the House is for the appointment of committees, and he is presently engaged in this task. Most committee appointments should be made public during the week of Jan. 15.

The second week of the session was devoted to preparation for the appointment of committees and for inauguration of the governor and the lieutenant governor. Also in the week's business was the actual election of the governor and the other constitutional state officers by the Legislature. Strange as it may seem, these officers are not actually elected until the Legislature convenes, and confirms the results of the votes cast in the November general election, being the actual election of these officers by the Legislature. Very few states, other than Mississippi, have this system, and many of you might recall the incident in Georgia where the Democrat Lester Maddox was elected by the Georgia legislature over Calloway, the Republican candidate, although Calloway had received a plurality of a few votes more than Maddox.

The schedule of events for this week included inauguration of the governor on the 16th, in forenoon, the inaugural parade in the afternoon, and an inaugural ball that evening.

It is not really until after the new governor has taken office, and his legislative program is announced, that the legislature will get down to the arduous task of reflecting the will of the people through legislative enactment.

Taxing for schools

Our readers write

Editor, Sea Coast Echo:

After paying increased property taxes this year, and not because of reassessments but because of higher school taxes prompts me to write to see if there is anyone who feels as I do. Grated the teachers need more pay - as per editorial of today's Echo, but how long do you think the elderly retirees can afford to keep up with the cost of owning their modest home along with the increase in taxes almost annually.

There are many like myself who reared children in Catholic schools but still paid school taxes - now we have great grandchildren and am paying higher taxes than ever.

I urge you write your Congressman about giving the retired residents some kind of consideration on our school tax.

A Conservative View

by James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON: Let me come back to Joanna Chall's chin-breaking, idol-smashing, myth-debunking book on the teaching of reading, for this is important. It is a heap more important than anything Lindsay said to Javits or Kenyatta said to Humphrey, or who's scoring what in the winter polling leagues.

Mrs. Chall is a professor in Harvard's Graduate School of Education, with a lifetime of experience behind her as a specialist in the techniques of teaching children how to read. Her book is the result of a massive three-year study, financed by a Carnegie grant. Unlike Rudolph Flesch and Arthur Trace, who are regarded as mavericks or lepers, Mrs. Chall is a certified member of the educational establishment. Hers is not a 'popular' book. It is a work of solid scholarship. School boards, school superintendents, textbook publishers and textbook committees cannot possibly ignore Learning to Read: The Great Debate.

Every person who has raised a child since 1930, or been through the schools himself, knows what the 'great debate' is all about. It involves the controversy that has raged between the advocates of 'look-say,' on the one hand, and the advocates of old-fashioned phonics on the other, in the teaching of reading. The fight has engaged thousands of teachers and hundreds of thousands of parents; it has involved half a billion dollars in textbook sales, it has provoked bitter, rancorous arguments across the nation. And, for most of these past 37 years, apostles of the 'look-say' or 'whole word' method have been in command.

At the heart of the dispute is the most basic of all skills: reading. The child who fails to master reading is a lost child. If he stumbles on the hard words, or loses comprehension of the printed word, he is fatally handicapped. He sees instructions through a fog; he misses the riches that great literature has to offer him; he cannot spell confidently or write easily. He becomes, in a very real sense, an illiterate. And the searing truth - which Mrs. Chall is too restrained to spell out bluntly - is that 'look-say' has created such illiterates by the millions.

Parents in California, as one example, have learned this to their sorrow. Statewide tests in 1966 disclosed an appalling picture. California children, reared on the 'look-say' method, scored far below the national average in reading skills. Additional tests in 1967 confirmed the dismal fact. In Los Angeles, first graders averaged the seventh percentile - that is, only six per cent of the first graders in the nation would have scored lower. Last week, the Los Angeles Board of Education at last came to its senses, and voted $140,000 to launch a crash program of phonics in the first three grades.

It is unfair to single out the Los Angeles board. By Mrs. Chall's estimate, 80 per cent of America's public school children, since the early Thirties, have been subjected to a predominantly 'look-say' method of instruction. Laymen who serve on school boards have been ill-equipped to argue with the experts, the professionals, the textbook salesmen. There was always a vague impression that research 'proved' that phonics was inferior to 'whole word recognition.' One of Mrs. Chall's most important findings is that the research 'proved' no such thing, properly interpreted, the research proved just the opposite.

Relatively few children, of course, have failed altogether to learn to read. Mrs. Chall does not denounce the 'look-say' method out of hand. What she has happened in many cases, she surmises, is that children have learned, on their own, to 'break the code' of letters, sounds, and syllables. Especially in middle-income and upper-income homes, where children have books and magazines available to them, reading is absorbed by osmosis or by bedtime story. The poor child, denied this home training, has been hurt most will be forced to sell.

Next year we will have another increase because the town of Waveland was allowed to incorporate us into its limits. (We have no children in any public schools.)

We did not ask to be incorporated, we bought outside city limits to avoid high taxes in the first place. Of course we were told taxes didn't go up the land was re-evaluated because property values went up in that section. I don't care what they call it Our Taxes Did Go Up! I don't think they should be allowed to do this unless there is a sale or transfer of this property. Whomever they feel like it they do this and

In the past few years, even before Mrs. Chall's definitive book came out, the forty-built structure of 'look-say' was beginning to crumble. Flesch's Why Johnny Can't Read struck at the foundation. Trace walloped the experts with What I've Known that Johnny Doesn't, a devastating comparison of reading in Russia and in the United States. Admiral Rickover fired a few torpedoes. Such publishers as Lippincott cautiously began to experiment with basic readers emphasizing phonics.

Now comes Mrs. Chall's powerfully documented study. This ought to bring the rickety temple down, and Dick and Jane and the jump-jump dog along with it. Oh, oh, great, great! Maybe the next generation will produce competent copywriters once again.

Junketing on tax money

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON - We reported recently that Adam Clayton Powell had offered to campaign against black power and Stokely Carmichael if President Johnson would order the Justice Department to let him off the hook regarding a grand jury investigation of his finances and his flinching with alibi plans credit cards. President Johnson turned a deaf ear.

Powell's next move was to turn up in the Watts area of Los Angeles making speeches which clearly encouraged the black power movement.

In other words, Powell gave a preliminary demonstration that he could either help or hurt race relations in the United States, according to how the Justice Department treats him. We can reveal that the Justice Department has done a very thorough job on Adam Clayton Powell, and the result is incriminating. However, Attorney General Clark is still reluctant to prosecute him at the time some white Congressmen have been getting away with exactly the same type of flinching with the taxpayers' money.

For example, more than half the members of Congress scattered all over the world during the year-end recess, taking vacations in many cases entirely at the taxpayers' expense. An unofficial count showed that 67 were going to Vietnam to get their pictures taken in the war zone with GIs from their districts. This is always good publicity, especially in an election year.

Many other junketeers headed for sunny climes, "investigating" everything from foreign aid to space-tracking stations. In most cases they simply were looking for a winter sunbat, but their expenses were being paid as long as they claimed they were investigating something for Congress.

So Attorney General Clark has a point when he argues that pillorying Adam Clayton Powell for the sins forgiven his white colleagues in Congress would not be entirely fair - no matter how guilty Adam may be.

Senate ethics

Sen. Robert Kennedy of New York is behind Life magazine's attack on Sen. Ed Long of Missouri. It's a part of his long vendetta against Jimmy Hoffa.

Life accused Long of accepting forwarding fees from Morris Shenker, Hoffa's St. Louis lawyer, charging that Long, in return for these fees, used his wiretap investigation to help Hoffa. This information was developed by Kennedy investigators who was Attorney General and later was turned over to Life magazine by Robby's former Assistant Attorney General Harry Miller.

The first Life article forced a Senate investigation which ended in Long's exoneration. Miller then gave Life additional material, which caused a second Senate investigation. Now Miller is developing more information, which is supposed to show that Long timed his moves in the wiretap investigation to help Hoffa each time he awaited a court ruling. Whether the charges against Long are true or not, they apparently were spirited from Justice Department files upon the orders of Sen. Kennedy.

The Senate Ethics Committee condemned four employees of Sen. Dodd for leaking information from office files. It will be interesting to see whether the Ethics Committee now condemns the powerful Senator from New York for leaking information from Justice Department files.

LBJ wisecracks

Despite the pressure of war and politics, President Johnson hasn't lost his sense of humor. Lately he has been turning famous quotations into wistful wisecracks.

He was talking one afternoon about the Presidential ambitions of Ronald Reagan. LBJ commented wryly that there is a difference between acting the role of President in the movies and actually holding the job. He quoted the late Will Rogers, who said: "Spinning a rope is a lot more fun when your neck ain't in it."

Another time, the President was discussing women's rights. He recalled a quotation from Dr. Samuel Johnson, who once remarked: "Nature has given women so much power that the law very wisely has given them little."

Still another time, LBJ tried to console Secretary of State Rusk over the opposition of Senate Democrats to their policies. He told Rusk to remember Notre Dame's immortal football coach, Knute Rockne, who, when disgruntled over the performance of his football team, once dashed out on the field and yelled: "If you four fellows will get out of the way, the others will go over for a touchdown."

So, however irritated he may get at his critics at times, LBJ still recognizes he's not the first man in history to have problems.

Nkrumah's Egyptian

Ghana's deposed strongman, Kwame Nkrumah, who once aspired to become emperor of all Africa, has not only lost his country, his palace and all his trappings. He has also lost his wife and three children.

The marriage was arranged 10 years ago on the advice of a soothsayer, who consulted his occult sources and solemnly counseled that the great Nkrumah should marry an Egyptian. The soothsayer prophesied that the couple would have a son who would become Emperor of Africa. Obsequiously, Nkrumah dispatched one of his tribemen to Cairo to find an appropriate Egyptian bride. A volunteer, named Fakhri, accompanied the emissary back to Ghana. Less than three hours after she was introduced to her famous fiancé, they were married, on Dec. 30, 1957.

The marriage turned out to be less romantic than she had dreamed. She could not speak the language; her husband neglected her; and she became desperately homesick. Nevertheless, the marriage produced three children, including the prospective emperor, who was named Gorbie Gamal. The latter is now nine years old and emperor only of his playroom in Cairo. For Fakhri hurried back to Cairo at the earliest opportunity after Nkrumah's downfall.

Recently, he summoned her and the children to Conakry, Guinea, where he is living in shabby exile. She showed up with out the children - to discuss divorce and alimony. Now back in Cairo, she sent word through the Egyptian embassy the other day that she also intended to retain custody of the children.

No one seems to know what happened to the soothsayer who originally advised Nkrumah to marry an Egyptian.

Fish inspection, too

Congress came to the rescue of the housewife last year by finally passing a tough meat inspection bill. However, we also out two billion pounds of fish a year, and there are 1,000 inspectors presiding over the fish market.

In addition, 50 per cent of our fish is brought in from foreign countries, untagged.

As a result, you can look for President Johnson to ask Congress for a tough fish inspection bill - a new milestone in consumer protection.

The weather for the past few days has been too cold to do much fishing. Several trips planned for the weekend out to the marshes were cancelled due to rain and cold weather.

A few fish are being caught where good water can be found. According to Ray Barker of Pearl River and the tributaries will be out for quite sometime as dirty water in the main river has reached this section. The river at Jackson has had an exceptionally high rise and flood waters reached Pearl River this week.

Due to local rains Jordan River and other streams are on the dirty side but should clear up shortly.

Another bond vote Leo Seal, Jr. re-elected bank prexy

Timing and confusion of the city's street fix bond being defeated Dec. 23, Joseph L. Marochino, chairman of the Citizens Advisory Committee, said Monday that group is recommending that city administration put the bond issue before the voters again.

We do not feel the people have adequate chance to express themselves and have recommended the city try once again on the proposed bond issue," Marochino said.

The committee met last Wednesday to discuss the bond election and arrive at recommendations for the future.

Marochino said they had been informed that many voters were out of town for the holidays when the election took place and were unable to cast their ballot.

The referendum was on two issues. Proposition No. 1 was for $475,000 of general obligation bonds for street work and Proposition No. 2, $500,000 in general obligation bonds to supplement the other funds under a special act of the 1966 legislature.

Less than one third, or about 1,200, voters went to the polls.

On proposition No. 1 the final tally was 626 against and 538 for. On Proposition No. 2, the count was 612 against and 525 in favor.

The group was scheduled to meet again last night.

Commissioners again discussed the advisability of hiring a director at this time.

Charles Hill of Pearl River decided to meet Monday to consider all applications received up until that time.

Appointment of engineers on that basis was deferred to new commissioners and additional time to study the Baker, Jr., Inc.'s proposal.

Baker is now employed on a meal basis pending decision of the commission and of supervisors.

Shelby Williams and Palmer of the Baker corporation expressed hope their organization would be retained to complete the initial plans. They stressed the continuity of engineering services once contracts let and construction underway.

Palmer also gave the new commissioners an orientation on all phases of proposed development within county.

Answers asked for a commencing of commission saying he was under the impression that all amounts required for completion of the project may not be in the hands of the commission.

He warned commissioners against letting the contracts go far advanced before they gained the condition of all construction items.

The commission's acceptance, Moore Powell and Co. was asked to be a certified breakdown as soon as possible.

Williams and Palmer also covered such items as grading and grubbing, access construction and hydraulic engineering.

Hancock CD bill cleared by state

Mississippi Civil Defense has certified the eligibility of the reorganized Hancock County civil defense council and authorized Lutter W. Kidd, director, to requisition and acquire surplus property from the Mississippi Surplus Property Program Commission, the report of supervisors was informed Monday.

Kidd reported on his trip to Jackson last week to confer with state officials and said he had secured a new generator for the county, 40 tires and other items.

Ways of hauling the articles here were discussed.

Possibility of purchasing citizens band radio equipment was raised but supervisors advised checking into their finances first.

U.S. Stockstill, who has the access road and clearing and grubbing contract for the port and harbor commission at Mulatto Bayou, appeared to give his version of expenses over running the office on the job. He contended he should not be penalized for any irregularities major resulting from change orders on the work.

An agreement was granted Coast Electric Power Assn. for re-location of the lines across Sec. 16-3-14 to improve service into the Crane area. W. E. Mackey explained the old line will be abandoned and a new one placed along the right side of Rd. 63 near the bridge.

The board adjourned until 10 a.m. Monday. It was to confer last night with the port commission and representatives of Michael Baker, Jr., Inc., over Baker's proposals for a new contract on port and airport consulting engineer.

20 teams check in for 32nd Invitational tilt

About 300 prep school basketball players plus cheerleaders, band members, students, faculty, fans and parents will converge on Bay St. Louis for the 32nd Annual Invitational Tournament which starts Wednesday and ends Saturday of next week.

The event is considered the most spectacular sports affair of the season in Hancock County and visitors will fill motels, dining establishments, etc., to the bursting point during the four-day tourney. Competing are 20 teams from 12 schools, boys and girls teams from Poplarville, Bay High, Stone, Hancock North Central, Pearl River Central, St. Martin, Pass Christian and Harrison Central, schools entering boys only are Long Beach, Notre Dame of Bilal, St. Stanislaus and Ocean Springs.

Action starts at 5 p.m. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Semi-finals start at noon Saturday with the girls finals slated for 7:15 p.m. and the boys 8:45 p.m.

Last year's Mighty Mike GoGo coaches averaged 39 1/3 points per game to lead Bay High to victory in the boys' division and the year before Big Wondall Ladner pushed Hancock North Central into the winner's berth. Pass Christian's girls are defending champs in the girls' division having upset Bay High's Tigerettes 35-31 in the finals.

This year Billy Sills' Tigerettes look like a shoe-in to cop the girls' cup and we're looking for Roland Ladner's Hawks of North Central, the only Class A school in the tourney, to upset the boys' trophy.

However, Bay High boys coach Wilmer (Wimpy) Seymour hinted out that this year the boys teams are more evenly matched probably than in any other year. Notre Dame of Bilal, Long Beach and Stone all have strong teams and either might make the winner's circle.

Most thrilling game of the tournament could be the battle between Bay High and coach Cucarro's St. Stanislaus scholastics slated for 8:45 p.m. Thursday, the first time the two arch-rivals have met in 100 years, athletic relations having been severed after a

Hawks pock Pirates, HNC drops three

Finding themselves 10 points behind at halftime, Hancock North Central's Hawks trailed in 18 in the third period and 28 in the fourth to defeat Pass Christian's Pirates 61-34 Saturday at the Pass after Hawks had taken the first two games of a quadruple-header.

The varsity girls lost 47-19 to the junior high boys 19-44 and the junior girls 10-32. Trying for their 15th win and not to lose this season, Hawks started cold and scored 4 points in the first quarter while the Pirates also led 13, Pass Christian also led 13 in the second stanza scored 14 to the Hawks' 13 but coach led in the final two games 16-12 and 20-13.

hottic season of rivalry. Bay High's Anthony Ladner who has been hitting the basket for more than 30 points in recent games will match shots with Rockaway star Weldon Frommeyer who also can score as many points while posting 18 or 21 rebounds.

Seymour said his starting lineup will probably be Ladner, David Compretta or Don Caldwell, guards; Jerry Johnson, center, and Mike Benigno, Mike Cave or Konny Miller, forwards. Cucarro will probably choose between Frommeyer, Sylvan Ladner, Mike Meyers, Vaughn Arceneaux, Ronke Gemilli, Al Lovings, Ronnie Genin and Xavier Lewis.

Coach Sills said he couldn't give a probable starting lineup as half the girls were out with the flu but he expects all to be in action for their first game at 5 p.m. Thursday against Stone. However, almost certain to see action will be Ann Perkins, Dottie Mitchell, Nancy McDonald, Sherry Dean, Sally Porter, Marsha Compretta, Debbie Weidman, Karen and Sherry Dean, Susan Ferry, Janet Kidd, Chris Everett, and Noel Phillips.

Calling all paraders

Once again, the parade, bicycle riders and marchers are invited to participate, but anyone wishing to take part must obtain an application form from Kitty (Mrs. Olla) Molitor and return same to her office signing the agreement to abide by rules of the organization. Everyone must be costumed, and while there'll be lots of elbow bending after the parade, absolutely no alcoholic beverages are consumed on parade. Anyone who remembers the hundreds of kids lining the streets last year, and in many cases treating for blocks beside the floats, will understand the reason for strict enforcement of this rule. One innovation will be an after the parade celebration to take place in the newly completed den, which is certainly making float construction much easier than last year when many shivered in makeshift buildings when building the elaborate contraptions.

We care a lot of your neighbors have stopped baking pies!

Maybe it's because they discovered Jane Parker Pies thousands have. But... you say, "No thanks, there is nothing like a good home-baked pie." We agree... they're great. But would you believe it if we told you our Jane Parker Pies taste home-baked? Probably not until you've tried one. Then you'd discover the crust is short and flaky like your own. You'd discover the fruit is the kind you'd use the best... juicy, not stiff with starch. And if you popped a Jane Parker Pie into the oven and warmed it before serving, you'd discover a pie you'd be proud to call your own. Are Jane Parker Pies a good reason for shopping A&P? They're one of many.
